Calling Davis, Cantor and Boehner - "Where are the JOBS?"

The November 2010 election was presumably all about jobs - how the Republicans would sweep to power in Congress and the "job creators" would respond with a great hiring boom. But since the election, deliberately creating and covering behind one smokescreen after another, Republican House leadership does little but continue its attack

This month we celebrated Labor Day, the movement that created the middle class in the 20th Century. Unfortunately, Republicans and their policies are determined to eliminate the middle class and the services government provides to a modern society.

Rick Perry's Texas is burning. Yet last March, Perry cut funding for local fire departments from $30 million to 47 million. Mitt Romney has presented a jobs programs. Yet as an executive of Bain Capital, he laid off thousands of workers and shuttered factories in Missouri and Indiana and shipped jobs overseas.

Since FDR, the Democratic Party with labor support, has implemented policies to protect America's families and give hope for the future of all of America's children.

To this point, Republicans have blocked the extension of the President's transportation programs to help rebuild and improve America's transportation infrastructure and employ thousands of American construction workers. Infrastructure programs funded by the federal government have been a hallmark of American history during the careers of Henry Clay, Abraham Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt, FDR and even Dwight Eisenhower.

We thank the labor movement for many things including the eight-hour workday; elimination of child labor; safety standards in the workplace and good wages.

It is time for all Americans to look at the real history of the role of the American government in providing services and the resulting employment from those services.

on workers by rolling out a repackaged anti-union, pro-business agenda that will hurt workers and continue to threaten our economic recovery.

As President Obama urges Congress to lower the payroll tax for most Americans and prepares to unveil his jobs plan later this week, we can help beat back Republican resistance and exert the same people power that has helped stem the radical tide in Wisconsin and Ohio.

Call Geoff Davis locally at 859-426-0080

and tell him to stop playing politics with the future of America:

- Stop obstructing progress;
- Support extension of the payroll tax cuts for most Americans, AND
- Support the President's jobs plan.

Insist that he MEET WITH VOTERS rather than hold "telephone town halls." And finally, ask him, "Mr. Davis, where are the jobs?"
